Advantages of using a freeport

A freeport allows for goods and materials to be imported, processed and re-exported without the goods being subjected to a country's local duties, taxes and regulations.

Tax benefits available

The tax incentives are intended to work together to encourage activity in tax sites by encouraging the purchase and development of land, acquiring machinery and equipment and hiring new employees.

Stamp duty land tax (SDLT)

There are two SDLT reliefs which apply to non-residential land situated within the tax site, which is used by the purchaser in the course of a commercial trade or profession.

Capital allowances

Capital expenditure benefits from two enhancements under the capital allowances regime. 1. Enhanced structures & buildings allowance of 10% for the acquisition. 2. 100% first year allowance for capital expenditure on qualifying plant and machinery.

National Insurance contributions (NICs)

Employers are entitled to zero-rated employers' NICs for three years for new employees. Terms and conditions apply.

Business Rates Relief

Business rates relief is available on premises operated by newly formed businesses and for businesses that relocate or expand / redevelop their existing property.

*All freeport benefits are subject to the status of the occupying company
